Tea With Aileen

In a morning sunbeam flecked with gold

Madura leaves, brown lit speckles

Fell like grain from spoon to pot

Black twigs of Russian Caravan

Depth of flavour, she said

A sparkle in her ocean eyes

Green leaf on white china

Sweet and light Mountain Mist

She laughed and added some

In the garden we sipped

From delicate cups

Wondered on how and why

And watched a white cloud

Fade into a wide, blue sky.
